A NOTE FROM THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Transitions are moments of change, and if you address them with diligence and wisdom, they can be moments of exciting growth. In the Summer edition of this newsletter, you heard directly from our Executive Director, Caroline Gwinn, on her retirement plans. There is no doubt that under her leadership, we experienced significant growth as an organization, and she will be missed.

While Caroline has moved to her next chapter, we are indeed fortunate to have Janet Newcomb to assume the role of Interim Executive Director temporarily. Newcomb has led and advised arts organizations across the United States, including orchestras, arts councils, and higher education programs, and has worked extensively with arts organizations throughout South Carolina. She has extensive experience in arts leadership, strategic development, and community-based arts initiatives, and will guide the organization during this transitional period.

"I'm honored to step into this role at such an important moment for ACA," said Newcomb. "Caroline Gwinn's leadership has not only strengthened the Center but has also had a lasting impact on Aiken's broader cultural community. Throughout my career, I've seen how strong, creative communities emerge when local arts centers thrive. I look forward to building on Caroline's legacy and working with staff, artists, and community partners to continue ACA's growth and engagement."

The Board of Directors is continuing our nationwide search for a new Executive Director. Our commitment to you is to find the right individual to lead us in expanding our role as a cultural cornerstone in the community. Together, we will continue to inspire and educate by providing unique visual and performing art experiences for all ages.

Warm regards,
Lyddie Hansen
Board President

Janet Newcomb,
Interim Executive Director

CALL TO ART

LONG MAY IT WAVE

Our nation's symbol at 250 years

Local artist perspectives on our American Flag

LONG MAY IT WAVE celebrates the American flag during our Nation's 250th birthday.

Come share your gift of Patriotic Artistry. Bring your original American flag-inspired creation in your choice of 2-D or 3-D media to the Aiken Center for the Arts by October 4-9, 2026. Aiken Center for the Arts invites our community members to share what the American flag means to you. The exhibition celebrates one of America's most recognized symbols through art. Join us as we honor the history, symbolism, and unity represented by our nation's flag. Possible ideas of exploration include patriotism, freedom, liberty, identity, democracy, protest, hope and belonging.

What are, or have been, your personal memories of the American flag? What activities have you and your family participated in that have involved the American Flag? What has surprised you about early forms and purposes the American flag has taken? What memories do you have of patriotic feelings you had growing up? Do you have family heirlooms in your possession that conjure patriotic emotions? Are there fabrics, prints or paintings that inspired patriotism? Songs? What books or stories resonate with you as being particularly patriotic?

As you think about your artistic contribution to the upcoming exhibit "Long May It Wave" recall that the Stars and Stripes had been from the start left in the hands of the people of the United States. The flags were not only home-made but home – designed as well. The strict regulations we now follow go back only one generation during earlier epochs of American history many variants of the Stars and Stripes were in simultaneous use. The freedom that the Stars and Stripes symbolize now, not only the freedom with which Americans used it in the past, but the freedom of its design – a timeless poetry of motion.

Exhibition runs Oct 22 - Nov 28, with an opening reception on Oct 22, 6-8pm. Entry form, eligibility and guidelines available in person, on our website or by scanning this QR code.

Submission Deadline:

Submissions will be submitted to Aiken Center for the Arts Oct 5-9, 2026.

“Long May it Wave: Lincolnian perspectives on Thomas Jefferson’s Declaration of Independence”

“All honor to Jefferson,” Lincoln wrote to a colleague, “to the man who, in the concrete pressure of a struggle for national independence by a single people, had the coolness, forecast, and capacity to introduce into a merely revolutionary document, an abstract truth, applicable to all men in all times, and so embalm it there, that today, and in all coming days, it shall be a rebuke and a stumbling block to the very harbingers to the reappearing tyranny and oppression.”

This exhibition, held during our country’s 250th anniversary, is intended to showcase, through art and artifacts, evidence—both verbal and visual—of the Great Emancipator’s homage to Thomas Jefferson and his Declaration of Independence. During the years before and during his presidency he continued to appeal to the Declaration and the equality clause as a gauge of what was transpiring, and what was at stake for America. At Gettysburg he took the final step in declaring the meaning of the war and of the national purpose that was embodied in the Declaration’s equality clause: “Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal...”

Lisa Anne Tindal

Redemption & Resilience

Exhibition Opening - December 3, 6:00-8:00pm

Exhibition runs December 3, 2026 - January 14, 2027

Main Gallery | "Redemption and Resilience"

Lisa Anne Tindal and Fred Townsend

Lisa Anne Tindal "I am an artist inspired by the redemptive themes found in the experiences of others. My paintings of women, often portrayed as angelic figures, seek to convey strength and courage while inviting an emotional response from the viewer. My life experiences, work with families in need of support, faith, and belief in the therapeutic value of art all influence my commitment to painting. Through my work, I hope to quietly and confidently offer hope to others.

In this body of work, I seek to convey a sense of inner connectedness through both figurative and abstract paintings. We pour into one another's lives, often without ever realizing the people we influence through our stories, our responses to hardship, and even our celebrations. We are all "in this together," intricately and intentionally influencing one another. Through my paintings, I hope to illuminate these unseen connections and remind us of the strength, courage, and hope we can share with each other.

Fred Townsend

Fred Townsend "I'm an oil painter in both surreal and realistic styles, using the language of symbolism, storytelling, and metaphor to explore the invisible threads that connect us to ourselves, to each other, to the natural world, and to the unseen.

My work lives in the space between dream, memory, and the seen, and the felt. I am drawn to images that hold tension—the beautiful and the strange, the familiar and the unknown—through layered composition, rich color, and meticulous detail. I create visual narratives that invite quiet contemplation and personal interpretation, whether painting realistically from observation or constructing surreal worlds from imagination. My goal is always the same: to evoke emotion, spark curiosity, and honor the mystery of being human.

Young Beethoven: The Spirited, Impassioned Virtuoso Daniel Adam Maltz

Thursday, January 14 at 7:00pm, Brown Pavillion

When a young Beethoven arrived in Vienna, his fiery virtuosity and expressive depth took the city by storm. This program offers a vivid portrait of Beethoven as a young composer-pianist. Performed on the type of Viennese fortepiano Beethoven knew, played, and composed for, it gives audiences a rare glimpse into his sound world. From his sparkling wit to brooding intensity, you will hear Beethoven's brilliance anew.

Daniel Adam Maltz is a Vienna-based fortepianist specializing in Viennese Classicism —especially the works of Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven. He is "considered the foremost performer in the world of the fortepiano" (Aspen Daily News) and tours in 50+ cities per year as a recitalist, concerto soloist, director, Lied accompanist, and clinician. Continuing to inspire kids this fall is musician and educator, Fred Williams, who will be working with youth to develop their vocal skills as they prepare a performance.

STRING PROGRAMS

FALL 2026. Aiken Center for the Arts currently offers beginning group strings instruction and three orchestras depending on one's level of experience. All Strings programs are available at no cost with donations always appreciated. Each semester course is valued at $110. We have instrument scholarships (violins only) if you need help overcoming financial barriers.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM. The goal of our strings program is to offer a pathway for students with no prior experience to learn an orchestra string instrument; violin, viola, cello, or bass, and eventually perform with one of our Orchestras. We aim to foster the desire for students to open possibilities within themselves and to develop the technical base needed to express the music through their instrument, engaging and inspiring our surrounding communities through our classrooms and performances. Aiken Youth Orchestra began in 2002 under the direction of USC Aiken Distinguished Professor Emeritus, Dr. Richard Maltz. Aiken Center for the Arts has nurtured and supported the Orchestra for 24 years, growing into our current strings program to serve our broader community.

ABOUT THE INSTRUCTOR. Angela Shaw has worked with the Aiken Youth Orchestra for eleven years and expanded her teaching and conducting role in 2022 to include all our strings programming: Beginning Group Strings, the Prelude Orchestra, the Strings Ensemble, and the Aiken Youth Orchestra. She attended Augusta State University, where she received a bachelor's degree in music education. She was a violin pupil of Dr. Angela Morgan and studied viola with Carl Purdy. She regularly performed with the Augusta Opera and the Augusta Players and currently performs with Augusta Symphony, Lyra Vivace Chamber Orchestra, and Augusta Choral Society. She is often a guest violinist and violist with the Magellan String Quartet and the Kiokee Quintet.

JOY IN THE JOURNEY PROGRAM

FOR THOSE LIVING WITH ALZHEIMER'S AND DEMENTIA

ENGAGING THE BRAIN

The Joy in the Journey program at Aiken Center for the Arts connects Aiken residents living with Alzheimer's disease and dementia with a mneme therapist who works with them to create an original painting. These beautiful and meaningful works of art are then framed and given to the participants.

Joy in the Journey serves participants through a method called mneme (pronounced NEM-MA) therapy, with a goal to provide a rewarding experience through everyday, pleasurable experiences to achieve whole brain synchronization and sustained attentive focus. This synchronization and focus in turn stimulates the brain's abilities.

SERVING PATIENTS & THEIR LOVED ONES

Alzheimers and dementia affect not only the people suffering from these life-changing illnesses, but their families and caregivers. A key component of Joy in the Journey is the comfort it brings to those who witness their loved ones benefiting from these therapeutic sessions.

CREATING REWARDING EXPERIENCES

Each session begins with the mneme therapist using everyday pleasures such as singing, painting, storytelling and praise in a unique combination to stimulate change in the brain and provide a rewarding experience for the artist. Through this therapy, memories can be stirred, giving each individual an opportunity to express oneself and a sense of accomplishment through the painting process. The participant then puts on an apron, turns to the canvas, and, after the therapist places the color, he or she is guided on brushing left to right. With the therapist right at their side, the patient works background to foreground until a beautiful masterpiece has appeared. Each Joy in the Journey painter is rewarded with the wonder and sense of accomplishment of beholding their own creative expression.

TWO WAYS TO PARTICIPATE

1. At Aiken Center for the Arts: Families of participants may schedule a Joy in the Journey session at Aiken Center for the Arts. No cost.

2. At area senior care facilities: We offer Joy in the Journey sessions on a monthly basis at multiple senior care facilities in our area. No cost.
